

ABSTRACT

A system includes a storage to store code for performing power up initialization of the system, and an interface to communicate with a handheld computing device. The code is executable on a processor to communicate with the handheld computing device through the interface during power up initialization of the system.

5